Some time afterwards he acknowledged one sin he had hitherto concealed. and then he speedily recovered his bodily bealth, and returned to his home cored in spirit

A remark of Mr. Justice Willes, that even the " Peculiar People" would not be supposed. have left a broken leg to set itself without medical aid, brings out the essence of the difficulty which many very religious people would have u accepting such asserted cures as these, accomplished without medicine, as in any way due to the prayers which preceded them. It would be said." Do you regard these cores as strictly miraculous or not ? If truly 'miraculous,' why do you admit that surgical cases need, surgical treatment, -ns certainly Pastor Blumburdt and, we believe also Dorothea Trudel, seem to have admitted freely? Even the "Peculiar People" of Essex don't seem to assert that prayer would cure a broken joint without haman intervention to set it properly. Yet pure miracle could as easily rectify a mechanical injury as an organic one, and if the process of your cure be not miraculous, it can scarcely be due to the special intervention of God, but must be owing either to mesmeric influence, or to the influence named by Mr. Gilbert as at least a restorative - the infinence of the mental repose and quietude enined by faith and prayer. But we do not think that, supposing the alleged cures of fairly proved,—there would be any occasion or any reason to substitute either meameric influence or the rather seemty and parely human influence of quietness of heart for the belief which not only the " Peculiar People," but ment people who believe in God, seem to entertain, be system and is intended, within certain limits. or to exert a definite effect of its own on the course of His Providence. The Peculiar People are " peculiar " only, as far as we see, in their disfreed of medicine, not in their trust to prayer. m- There is obviously no kind of some in neglight. ing the appropriate physical means of recovery. from discuse, any more thankin neglecting the ort The "Peculiar People" would be the first to ery. een mut on any one who should abatuin from food rta. in the faith that God would fred him directly.

that Yet there is absolutely no difference between and neglecting food which tends to prevent your heing ill, and neglecting medicina which tends who is countered the illness when it comes. The ider "Peculiar People" would probably call it rely. "tempting God" to pray for food without taking the means to obtain it, when they had thin ordinary means at their command. If so, it is thin ordinary means at their command. If so, it is deed equally tempting God to refuse quinine (say), the in ague, which quinine will almost always care. tann The more sensible among the "Peculiar People" thin do not wholly deny the value of medicine. Pastor Blumbardt, for instance, admitted to Mr Gilbert, that be had a limited, though very limited, faith rous, in it. We have seen that Dorothen Trudel bad lail the same limited faith in it. Small faith may with he reasonable, for few medicines are in any senso specifics, and the highest medical art new namely dispenses with medicine, instead of dispensing it. But so far as medical skill can really go, there is as little piety in ignoring it as in ignoring the warmth, clothing, and food which are the ordinary conditions of well-being.
